

Unit 03: Instructional Planning

1. Justification of the Need for Teaching Plan and Lesson Structuring

Instructional planning is the systematic process of organizing teaching activities to achieve desired learning outcomes. A well-structured lesson ensures effective, meaningful, and student-centered learning.

Why Teaching Plan is Necessary

1. Ensures Clear Objectives

- Defines what students should know, understand, and do.
- Aligns teaching with curriculum goals.

2. Promotes Organized Teaching

- Prevents confusion and time wastage.
- Maintains logical sequence of content.

3. Supports Students' Learning

- Connects prior knowledge with new concepts.
- Encourages active participation.
- Addresses diverse learning needs.

4. Enhances Classroom Management

- Reduces unnecessary disruptions.
- Maintains smooth flow of instruction.

5. Improves Evaluation

- Helps assess whether learning objectives are achieved.
- Provides basis for feedback and reflection.

2. Lesson Structuring

Lesson structuring generally includes three main stages:

3.1 Preparatory Phase (Introduction)

- Motivates learners.

- Activates prior knowledge.
- States objectives clearly.
- Links previous lesson with new content.

Delivery Phase (Presentation)

- Explains new concepts.
- Uses teaching aids and activities.
- Encourages interaction.
- Provides examples and demonstrations.

Consolidation Phase (Closure)

- Summarizes key points.
- Clarifies doubts.
- Provides practice exercises.
- Assigns homework.
- Conducts short assessment.

Well-structured lessons improve retention, understanding, and application of knowledge.
